

Administrative Law and Tenders

The Administrative Law and Tenders Department at Salomon Lipschutz has vast and diversified experience in advising and representing both individuals and entities from the private sector, as well as governmental and municipal authorities and bodies (such as local municipalities and government companies), in all aspects of public and administrative law, such as matters relating to tenders, planning and construction, public transportation, local municipalities and municipal rates, environmental restrictions, allegations of discrimination regulation and the freedom of information, the freedom of business, the freedom of speech and other basic and constitutional rights.

Public and administrative law affects almost all aspects of life including business, financial and industrial activities. Governmental and municipal authorities and bodies increasingly influence the life of individuals, and the activities and operation of business entities, by use of legislation, regulation, issuance of licenses and permits, allocation of national resources (with or without public tenders) and by entering into transactions with parties from the private sector, or providing such parties with binding governmental undertakings.

The extensive and diversified experience of the Department team members allow them to provide reliable legal representation to their clients in a wide variety of aspects, by analyzing and counseling as to implications of the applicable law or regulation, or implications of a proposed law or regulation, representation of clients in negotiations and dealings with applicable governmental or municipal bodies or authorities and, if necessary, representing clients in related aspects of litigation proceedings, at all levels of the Israeli court system, including the High Court of Justice, the various Administrative Courts and Municipal Courts as well as building and planning committees and appeal committees.

Furthermore, the Administrative Law Department has gained extensive experience and expertise of advising clients in all aspects of wide-range, complex, large-scale public tenders published by organizations, local authorities and municipalities as well as private bodies

The Administrative Law Department also deals with a variety of transportation-related public tenders relating to the operation of public transportation lines by buses and cabs (including tenders published in the context of privatization process of the public transportation market in Israel), the operation of designated transportation solutions and the establishment of light railways, infrastructures relating to public tenders concerning the operation of quarries and roads and railway infrastructures, multiple real estate-related public tenders published by the Israel Lands Administration and a variety of public tenders for the procurement of equipment and services.
